

Plot Lease, Expiry and Renewal

Some plots have an expiry date. Others may be permanent.

Use plot information to check how long a plot is owned for.

Checking a Plot

Stand inside a plot and use:

```
/plot info
```

Look for the plot's expiry or owned-until date.

You can also check your plots through:

```
/plot panel
```

Expiry Reminders

You will receive reminders when one of your plots is getting close to expiry.

You can also see if a plot is close via looking at /plot panel, as it will turn orange, and then red.

Renewing a Plot

Use the correct matching claim item on your plot to renew or extend it when available. If the plot claim isn't working, it's either the wrong size or you do not have perms to extend the lease.

Follow the messages shown in chat.

Existing plot actions usually use a short confirmation flow:

- left-click to begin confirmation (or click the air on bedrock)
- wait for the countdown
- left-click again when prompted (or click the air on bedrock)
- right-click to cancel (or click the ground on bedrock)

Expired Plots

If a plot expires, you will not be able to interact inside the plot until it is renewed or claimed again.

Any player can claim expired plots, so make sure to claim yours before it gets stolen!

Permanent Plots

Permanent plots do not expire and can very rarely be found at /warp docks from the shady guy at the end.
